Visual Processing Issues in Young Children: Practical Strategies for Identifying and Remediating

Course Description:

Visual Processing is essential to the development of the young children we work with. This requires accurate detection of images as well as the ability to perceive and use what is seen. This 3 hour evening workshop will examine visual processing, cover basic techniques for identifying visual processing problems in young children, provide practical strategies for optimizing visual processing, and explore therapeutic activities that build skills. Instructional Methods: lecture, video, handouts, question/answer.

Who Should Attend? Course material is appropriate for all beginner-to-intermediate level Early Intervention Professionals.

Learning Objectives – Upon completion, Participants will be able to:

- ◆ Describe milestones in young children's vision development.
- ◆ Recognize and explain visual processing deficits.
- ◆ Conduct a basic ocular motor screening for young children.
- ◆ Incorporate practical strategies for seating, positioning and environmental modifications to maximize vision and visual processing.
- ◆ Engage young children in fun activities that optimize their vision and visual processing skills.
